I like the color scheme they used on this website a lot

I like the how the home page has a nice graphic that moves as you scroll, may try to implement something similar on one of my pages

The way this website goes from scrolling to staying on the same page is really creative and I may try it if I can figure it out.

It's hard to show in the sketch of my web page, but I would like to have the flowers in the middle changing between a few different pictures of different flowers. I also want to have the bees change when you hover over them. Another idea, if possible, is to have the cursor look like a honeycomb and have a few tiny bees that chase it around the page. I will keep the weekly, exercise, etc. pages more simple and have a menu at the top similar to the one from class for navigating to each section, I will most likely have these as different flowers.
